Lisa Mahon Lynch

Managing Director and Director, Global Trading Regulatory and Client Engagement

In her role as director, Lisa represents the firm's views on global trading topics to relevant client, regulatory, and industry groups. She engages internally and externally on regulatory developments that may influence market structure and the trade execution process for our clients. She also liaises with traders, product management, and our Global Relationship Group to define client-facing content and messaging as they relate to trading.

Lisa is a member of the Best Execution Working Group. She is also a member of the Wellington Veterans business network, as well as a member and former chair of the firm's largest business network, the Women's Business Alliance.

Before assuming her current director role in 2019, Lisa was the director of trading and counterparty services, where she led the business, risk, and trading research teams within global trading. She began assuming management responsibilities at Wellington while trading, where she was tasked with overseeing the firm's Americas equity trading desk, and for executing trades as part of a team focused on the financial sector.

Prior to joining the firm in 2006, Lisa held trading positions at Independence Investment (1997 – 2006) and Baring Asset Management (1992 – 1997). She began her career as an assistant with PaineWebber, Inc. (1990 – 1992).

Lisa received both her MBA (1998) and BS (1989) from Bentley University.
